

Mr Twit

Opening

Would you like to read about the most disgusting man on Earth? Meet Mr Twit.

Appearance

Mr Twit is a hairy old man. He has hairs sprouting from everywhere. The spiky, sharp, black hairs which grow everywhere, make his face difficult to see. The hairs are as spiky as a hedgehog's back but much dirtier. In Mr Twit's dirty beard, old, rotten food is hidden which he sometimes eats when he's feeling hungry. Bushy carpets grow above the foul Mr Twit's eyes. What an awful looking man he is!

Personality

On the inside, horrible Mr Twit is no better than he is on the outside. He is just as disgusting. The mean, miserable man is as bad tempered as a grumpy, grizzly bear (and he looks a bit like one too). Usually, Mr Twit spends his time shouting loudly at his ugly wife.

Hobbies

Most of the time Mr Twit's favourite hobby is to play tricks on his horrible wife. Mean, nasty, cruel tricks. He is as wicked as a witch. Mr Twit is not an animal lover although he owns monkeys. Sometimes, he spends hours training his poor monkeys to stand upside down on top of each other. Mr Twit is not bad mannered. In fact, he has no manners at all. The words please and thank you never cross his lips. How rude he is! At the end of any disgusting meal that he eats, he simply wipes his grubby beard and face all over the smelly table cloth. Occasionally, his sleeve is also used to wipe his face all over. Meals usually end with a tremendous burp. Bird pie is one of his favourite meals although he is not too keen on worm spaghetti.

Ending

Would you like to meet Mr Twit? Keep away if you see him!

Y2 writing skills:

- Capital letters and sentence end punctuation
- Capital letters for names
- Different sentence types- statement, question, exclamation, command
- Conjunctions (and, or, but, so, because, however)
- Word with suffixes ful, less, ness, ly, ment, er, est
- Commas in list sentences
- Contractions
- Careful handwriting
- Apostrophe for possession
- Adjectives/ similes/ alliteration

